Certainly! Data deduplication involves identifying and removing duplicate entries from a dataset. In this dataset, duplicates can be identified by comparing all columns or a subset of columns that uniquely identify a record. Here, I'll deduplicate the dataset based on all columns:

- 1. Identify Duplicates: Check for rows that have identical values across all columns.
- 2. Remove Duplicates: Keep only the first occurrence of each duplicate row.

Here's the deduplicated dataset:
