Certainly! To perform data deduplication, we need to identify and remove duplicate entries from the dataset. Duplicates can be identified by comparing all columns or a subset of columns that uniquely identify a record. In this case, I'll assume that a combination of brokered_by, status, price, bed, bath, acre_lot, street, city, state, zip_code, and house_size can be used to identify unique records. Here is the deduplicated dataset:

This deduplicated dataset removes any exact duplicate rows based on the specified columns. Note that some entries may still appear similar due to slight variations in data entry (e.g., typos in city names), but they are not considered duplicates in this context.
