Certainly! Data cleaning involves addressing various issues such as missing values, inconsistent data formats, and incorrect data entries. Here's a step-by-step approach to cleaning the dataset:

1. Remove Duplicates: Identify and remove duplicate rows based on unique identifiers or a combination of columns.

2. Handle Missing Values:
   - For columns like `brokered_by`, `street`, `city`, `state`, and `zip_code`, decide whether to fill missing values with a placeholder (e.g., "Unknown") or leave them as NaN if they are not critical.
   - For numerical columns like `price`, `bed`, `bath`, `acre_lot`, and `house_size`, consider filling missing values with the median or mean of the column, or leave them as NaN if they are sparse.

3. Standardize Data Formats:
   - Convert `price` to a consistent numerical format by removing any currency symbols and commas.
   - Ensure `bed` and `bath` are numerical by converting words like "four" and "two" to numbers.
   - Standardize date formats in `prev_sold_date` to a consistent format (e.g., YYYY-MM-DD).

4. Correct Inconsistent Entries:
   - Replace placeholder values like `-1` or `nan` in `zip_code` and `house_size` with NaN.
   - Ensure `status` values are consistent (e.g., replace "f" and "s" with "for_sale" and "sold").

5. Remove Irrelevant or Erroneous Data:
   - Remove rows with critical missing information that cannot be reasonably filled (e.g., missing `street` and `city`).
   - Remove rows with clearly erroneous data (e.g., negative or zero values in `price`).

Here's a cleaned version of the dataset with these steps applied:
